Disclosure Based on the Principles of the Corporate Governance Code

[Supplementary Principle 1.1.1] 《Ensuring shareholder rights》

When a considerable number of votes have been cast against a proposal by the Company and the proposal was approved by the General Meeting of Shareholders, the Company's Board of Directors, etc., analyzes the reasons for this and considers the need for shareholder dialogue and other measures.

[Principle 1.3] 《Basic capital policy》

The basic capital policy of the Company is to secure a sufficient level of net assets as a holding company of regional financial institutions in order to ensure that Kiraboshi Bank performs its functions to provide a smooth supply of funds, and also to strive to improve capital efficiency by improving profitability and management efficiency.

In addition, the Company regards the return of profits to shareholders as one of the important management measures and will continue to pay stable dividends.

[Principle 1.4] 《Cross-shareholdings》

1. Basic policy on cross-shareholdings

(1) Basic views concerning cross-shareholdings

The Group does not hold the shares, etc. of its trading partners or other such associates, in principle, except in cases where it considers that this will contribute to the medium- to long-term enhancement of the corporate value of the Group by maintaining and strengthening trading relationships with its trading partners.

The Board of Directors meets to examine and validate the effect and other aspects of cross-shareholdings at least once per year, from perspectives including the appropriateness of the purpose and economic rationality of the cross-shareholdings, and the comprehensive maintenance and strengthening of relationships with trading partners.

In principle, the Group sells cross-shareholdings not considered meaningful or reasonable, after considering the impact on markets and other relevant factors.

(2) Regular inspections of the meaningfulness and economic rationality of cross-shareholdings

The Board of Directors regularly examines and validates the benefits and risks associated with cross-shareholdings, and their relationship with the cost of capital, in terms of a profitability criterion using the following indicator.

[Profitability indicator] Profit after deducting the cost of credit, divided by the book value of the shares

The Group treats cross-shareholdings for which the profitability criterion is not satisfied as follows. If it is deemed necessary to continue holding the shares from the perspective of comprehensively maintaining and strengthening the relationship with the relevant trading partner, then the Group negotiates to increase or improve profitability. If it is not deemed necessary to continue holding the shares, the Group negotiates to sell them.

(3) Policy on responding to cases in which the cross-shareholding counterparty has indicated an intention to sell the Company's shares

Where the other party to a cross-shareholding has indicated an intention to sell or otherwise dispose of the Company's shares, the Group will not impede this sale or disposal, such as by suggesting that this would lead to a reduction in business transactions.

2. Basic policy on the exercise of voting rights

(1) Basic views concerning the exercise of voting rights

The Group does not decide on how to exercise voting rights based solely on quantitative criteria but makes a comprehensive decision from perspectives including the long-term enhancement of corporate value and the promotion of sustainable growth.

(2) Standards for the exercise of voting rights

When exercising voting rights, the Group determines whether or not to agree to proposals based on its focus on the status of corporate governance and compliance systems at the investee company, and upon consideration of factors such as the performance and the status of shareholder returns. For proposals such as the following, for which it is considered necessary to engage in careful consideration from the perspective of corporate value enhancement, the Group thoroughly investigates factors such as the reason for the proposal and its purpose, and determines whether or not to agree to the proposal with reference to the results of dialogue, etc., with the relevant company, where necessary.

- Mergers, acquisitions, or organizational restructuring such as the transfer, acquisition, or divestiture of important businesses
- Takeover defense measures
- Third-party allotment through the issuance of shares under favorable terms
- The presentation of retirement bonuses to officers of insolvent companies or otherwise poorly performing companies, etc.

Where there is the risk of a conflict of interest in the execution of voting rights, the Group responds appropriately based on its policy on the management of conflicts of interest.

By recruiting and promoting a wide variety of talents, the Group will ensure diversity and adapt to the changing times.

The Group actively promotes diversity within its organization, including women’s participation and advancement, and is creating workplace environments to enable women to maintain a high level of motivation by developing and actively assigning candidates for the next generation of managers.

However, as the Group’s efforts are mostly focused on graduate recruitment at present, this has not yet led to the appointment of foreigners to management positions, and the Group has not yet established a target.
